BRENTWOOD

You've got San Vicente to 26th Street. If you were to reside here sans car (a no-no for living in Los Angeles) you'd pretty much be able to find everything you need right here. Mark Goldstein's Madison — with additional locations in Westlake, Malibu and on 3rd Street — has maintained his vision of handpicking and sourcing everything that goes into his stores. There's plenty to get you in the mood to shop — you can get fitted head to toe here (and find just the right purse to accessorize). Pick up a Missoni dress, step into the latest Marni shoe and top it off with a Stella McCartney satchel. As Goldstein says about shopping in this climate (echoing our very own earlier sentiment): "Life is short, so one must enjoy it."

To go with that original outfit you've just put together, the perfect accoutrement is a sparkly something from Peter Norman's place. You can even custom design that fab creation you've always wanted — Norman's artisans are on hand to take your vision and make it a shimmering reality tout suite.

Of course, most people who spend time shopping in Brentwood probably have a child or two. Enter Pumpkinheads. Little girlies can look just like their "boho" mommies in Pink Chicken skirts, while boys can slip into Joe's Jeans' latest rebel fit. Of course, they carry their tried-and-true lines — I didn't even know Diesel made kids clothes.
